

Said Aly gets the highest votes in the Suez & Red Sea Chamber of Shipping elections

Said Aly, the Chairman of the Suez & Red Sea Chamber of Shipping, has won the most votes in the Chamber's elections that witnessed a heated competition.

In a special statement to "Al A'alam Al Youm", Mr. Aly confirmed that at the top of the chamber's priorities after forming the Board of Directors is to coordinate with the other chambers of shipping in order to face the challenges of the coming period, to develop the marine and shipping services for the benefit of the Egyptian economy, and to fulfill the requirements of all who work in the maritime transport field.

Mr. Said confirmed that this can not be achieved without the consorted efforts and the fruitful cooperation with all officials. He pointed out to the necessity of amending some of the provisions of the ministerial decrees that organize the activities of the maritime transport for the common good.

The attendance of the general assembly reached 80% of those who have the right to vote. This large attendance reflected the desire of the general assembly for development and change.

The elections resulted in the success of Said Aly, Abdel Meguid Matar, Mohamed Nagy, Aly Al Shareef as representatives of shipping agencies, and Ahmed Badawy, Sayed Al Rreedy, Mohamed Radwan as representatives of the shipping services companies.

The elections took place in a democratic atmosphere where glass boxes were used the attendance of representatives chosen by the general assembly to observe the voting process.
